I Samuel, 3:12. "Because his sons made themselves vile and be restrained them not."

This story of the fall of the house of Elik is one of the most pathetic among all the narratives of the old textament. In it we read of a man of great integrity and much force of character, who, for 49 years had acceptably and m most unique fashion united in himself the offices of high proper and character, who, for the control among the people.

Battle of Aphek.

It was not long after this that the father as well as the child her bearing the people of the same of the control and because it cried, it was anything it cared for, and before it was anything like old enough to be men, worthless and dissipated from the beginning, became, with the additional power given them through their father made application for its committal to a resorbital to a resorbi word among the people.

It was not long after this that the wifful sons, against their father's protest, carried forth the ark of the sacred presence to the hattle field of Aphek as a sort of charm against defeat, and there met their father We have no sort of sympathy to wasts upon them, but whose heart does not go out to the old father, well nigh a centenarian, sitting in his high seat by the city gate, straining his almost sightiess eyes toward the field of battle, and trembling in his heart for the ark of God.

city gate, straining his almost sightiers even toward the field of battle, and trembling in his heart for the ark of God.

Russer strives.

Presently a runner comics with torn clothing and earth upon his head, and the swe-stricken crowds followed him eagerly to the judges' feat. "What news man? Speak up! is the cry, and the messenger answers: "Israel is field before the Philistines, there hath been a great slaughter amoung the people. Hephul and Phinehas are dead, and the ark of God is taken." And it came to pass when he made mention of the ark of God, that the aged priest fell from eff the seat backward, and brake his neek, and died; for he was an old man and heavy.

And he took him aside from the multitude, and put his fingers into his ears, and he spit, and touched his tongue:

ears, and he spit, and touched his tongue:
And looking up to heaven, he sighed, and saith unto him, Ephphatha, that is, Be opened.
And straightway his cars were opened, and the atring of his tongue was loosed, and he spake plain.
And he charged them that they should tell no man; but the more he charged them, so much the more a great deal they published it.
And were beyond measure astonished arring, He hath done all things will he maketh both the deaf to hear,
